The newsletter from Oasis Financial Services

More than 2.6 million* mortgage borrowers have never experienced an environment where the Bank Rate has risen.

» The increase in the Bank of England's Bank Rate from 0.25% to 0.5% is the first such rise since July 2007. Back then, the rate hit 5.75%, although, for much of the following decade the Bank Rate did sit at 0.5%. (Source: Bank of England, November 2017)

So it's not panic stations, and the Bank of England has regularly said that any rise(s) would be measured and increase slowly over time. But it will be a concern for some, such as the 4 million or so* on (or tracking) their lender's variable rate, who may see a rise in their monthly payments.

The current climate

In recent months we've already seen some lenders upping their mortgage rates, to some extent in anticipation of a Rate rise, and partly because of an increase in SWAP rates (the interest charged between banks for lending to each other).

That said, the whole market hasn't changed overnight, and if you consider your existing deal, should you be on a fixed rate, for example - and took it out a few years back - then you may be pleasantly surprised to see what's currently on offer.

We'll let you
RELAX...

The importance of Advice

In short, the Bank Rate rise is simply yet another consideration amongst the ongoing issues of Brexit, rising inflation, value of the pound, house price moves and the overall economic conditions for the UK.

Of course, you may be perfectly happy with your current situation and any deal that you're on, together with having one or more protection policies in place to ensure that you (and perhaps your family) are in a good position should the unexpected occur.

However, for others the Bank Rate rise may be a wake-up call, which prompts the need to have a conversation, such as:

1. You're approaching the end of your mortgage deal period, and want to chat through the options, and perhaps snap-up one of the current deals on offer.
2. You might simply want to change your current arrangement, possibly to raise further funds, or feel that it may be financially beneficial, even when factoring in any applicable early repayment charges.

3. A house move may be on the cards, and you might require a larger mortgage.

4. You may be one of the 3-4 million** sitting on your lender's Standard Variable Rate, and could want to act, or perhaps feel (possibly wrongly) that you may not meet the current affordability criteria.

5. You're a first-time buyer that's saved up a deposit, are keen to jump onto the property ladder, and perhaps take advantage of the schemes on offer.

6. Or you're a landlord - or prospective one - in which case it would be wise to talk to us, as so much is occurring in this sector.

As you can see there are plenty of areas where we may be able to help you, so please get in touch to find out more.

You may have to pay an early repayment charge to your existing lender if you remortgage.

The Financial Conduct Authority does not regulate some forms of Buy-to-Let mortgages.

Make your home YOUR OWN

Many of you may feel that you've applied your own form of austerity for long enough and might be keen to get on with much-needed or desired improvements around your home.

» Your primary motivation should be to opt for improvements that best meet your needs, or those of your family. However, don't lose sight of the financial benefits that may accrue too - particularly if, at the back of your mind, you want to make your home more saleable.

Value added choices...

What adds value to your property often also improves your quality of life. Adding extra space to your home tends to be the most financially lucrative - whether that's building upwards, with a loft conversion, building outwards with an extension, or converting the garage.

According to Nationwide, as a rule of thumb a 10% increase in floor space adds about 5% to the price of a typical house. Adding a double bedroom to a 2-bed house, could increase its value by around 11%. In the case of a loft conversion (or extension) incorporating a double bedroom and bathroom, this could add about 22% to the value of a 3-bed, 1 bathroom house.*

Consider the basics

Before you embark on obvious pleasing developments, consider any structural problems, such as a leaking roof, and get them sorted first, as it would be a lot more disruptive if done after the event.

Also, in some instances, simply obtain planning permission, ensuring that it's still in place when you come to sell, as that can also add value to your property.

Securing the extra funding

Dependent on the amount you require, the two obvious routes are remortgaging, or seeking an additional loan. The good news is that whilst you'd need to meet the affordability criteria, there are some excellent deals on offer - and in many cases, better than 12 months ago.**

Conversely, if you feel you may struggle to raise more funds, then do assess your current deal. For example, if you're on your lender's Standard Variable Rate, then the possible savings each month from seeking out a better deal, may go some way towards helping to cover the costs of the smaller jobs around your home.

PROTECTION - dispelling myths

■ £13m a day paid out in 2016.
 ■ 97.3% of all protection claims met.
(Source: Association of British Insurers, May 2017 release)

If you faced an untimely death, or were unable to work due to an injury, or perhaps suffered a critical illness - you (or your family) may be very grateful that there was a protection policy in place.

Yet recent research showed that only 26% have a life policy, with a far smaller percentage having either a critical illness or income protection plan in place.

The same survey also set out why they felt a protection plan was not for them:

1. 'It's too expensive.'
2. 'Don't see the benefit of having it.'
3. 'Don't trust the insurer to pay out in the event of a claim.'

(Source: Royal London, March 2017)

All understandable concerns, but do make sure you talk to us first before writing it off, and let's briefly cover here each of those points.

1. 'It's too expensive.' Costs will vary widely due to age, health, lifestyle, extent of cover required, etc. But the insurance industry is both highly competitive, and innovative, and we can search for the most suitable deals.

You can, of course, do it yourself online, but you might find that when you are confronted by a raft of options, you may agree that it makes sense to take advice.

Those options could encompass, for example, plans that reward you for living more healthily. If cost is an issue, then you could consider removing extras like indexing for inflation to control the expense.

Additionally, we have written in the past that by merely cutting out the odd glass of wine, take-away, magazine, etc, you may be quite surprised how this all adds up, and it might then enable you to fund a 'potentially life-changing' protection policy.

2. This leads us nicely onto 'Don't see the benefit of having it.' It's often difficult to contemplate needing a protection policy, until you REALLY NEED IT! Take a look at the Seven Families initiative to get a feel for how it's helped others: www.7families.co.uk

3. 'Don't pay out.' See the post-it note image above, which refutes this myth, as 97.3% of claims were paid out in 2016, equating to £13m a day.

Do get in touch to find out more. As with all insurance policies, terms, conditions and exclusions will apply.

First-Time LUCKY

Despite the perceived difficulty of entry onto the property-owning ladder, due to deposit and affordability issues, the First-Time buyer market has held up remarkably well over the last decade, which encompasses the peak lending years of 2006 and 2007.

» Moving homeowner transactions halved between 2006 and 2016, whilst first-time buyer numbers only declined by a modest 16%, and reached a record £53bn of borrowing in 2016.* As we go through 2017, borrowing for first-time buyers continues on an upward trajectory, with July showing a 13.6% year-on-year increase.**

Why it's doing well...

There are numerous initiatives in place that have helped deliver support for the first-time buyer over the last few years. Plus there has also been a great deal of 'input' from the Bank of Mum & Dad!

With regard to the initiatives, the Help-to-Buy schemes, for example, have assisted 150,000 first-time buyers. This has accounted for over 40% of the increase in the first-time buyer numbers since the schemes were introduced in 2013.*

Help-to-Buy has enabled many buyers to have access to some of the better rate deals, by only requiring a smallish deposit of, say, 5-10%. Off the back of this it's also encouraged some lenders to offer - outside help-to-buy schemes - similar 90% loan-to-value deals, which first-timers could also consider.

Where we can help

Understandably there are endless options to assess, and that's why it makes sense to take advice.

Not only could we assist in finding the most suitable deal for your needs, we may be able to help protect your all-important credit rating. Conversely, if you applied directly and contacted a wide number of lenders, you may find that extensive searches could mean that it impacts badly on your credit rating, as the systems may interpret this as someone who is desperate for cash! Through our market knowledge, we would have a far better feel, enabling us to opt for products where we believe you're more likely to find something at a rate and cost that best meets your needs. Plus, it will hopefully protect your credit rating along the way.

MarketFACTS

Inflation

Consumer Price Inflation (CPI) currently sits well above the 2% target at 3% (and is expected to rise further).

What of House Prices?

In October 2017, UK house prices delivered a modest 2.5% annual growth. A year earlier it was 4.6%. Also, there were marked regional differences, with a small price fall for London in the Q3 data. (Source: Nationwide, House Prices, Q3 2017 and October 2017)

WHO ARE THE FIRST-TIME BUYERS?

20-30 years ago the average first-time buyer would have been in their early/mid 20's and would have found it relatively easy to get a mortgage. It's all changed now...

- Average age = 30

- Average loan size = £139,000
  - Average loan-to-value = 85%
  - Average income multiple for a loan = 3.60
  - Average proportion of household income to service the loan = 17.4%

Bad Times... ...GOOD TIMES

A key consideration for BUY-TO-LET landlords is to gauge the levels of 'supply' and 'demand'.

» Whilst landlords also face a number of tax and regulatory issues, the demand for renting is still fairly strong, as everyone knows we aren't building enough homes to meet the needs of a growing population. This - combined with the difficulties many renters face in getting together a suitable deposit to exit the rental sector and enter the home purchase arena - will help to maintain demand.

Of course, there are marked regional differences, so if you're currently a landlord, or wish to become one, you need to do your homework and assess how it may pan out in the areas in which you operate, or plan to operate, and the type of renter you're after.

Dealing with what's in front of you

From April 2017, tax relief on landlord's mortgage costs was restricted to the basic rate of income tax. And, over the next three years, the proportion of borrowing costs that landlords can offset against tax will taper down to zero.

Additionally, landlords face new rules restricting other deductible expenses they incur from renting property, such as limiting tax relief for wear and tear in fully furnished properties.

Landlords have also faced higher rates of stamp duty on property purchases, as anyone who buys a second home has had to pay 3% on top of the normal rate of stamp duty. This means that each investment by a landlord will have a stamp duty bill of at least 3% and possibly as much as 15% of the purchase price.

The final strand in these developments relates to greater regulatory requirements from the start of this year. This required lenders to consider likely future interest rates over a five-year period (unless the loan rate is fixed or capped for five years or more). Specifically lenders have to:

- Stress test their lending against an expectation of an increase in buy-to-let mortgage rates of at least 2%.
- Assume a minimum rate of 5.5%, even if the stress test of a 2% increase would actually produce a lower rate than that.

A WAY FORWARD?

Some landlords have opted for, or are considering, placing their portfolio within a 'limited company' status, as this may be beneficial with regard to mitigating the impact of the tax initiatives, and that limited companies are not affected by the PRA regulations.

However, this may not be right option for some, so it's essential that you take advice from us, and your accountant.

And there's more! From 30 September 2017, the Prudential Regulation Authority (PRA) implemented special underwriting rules for landlords with a portfolio of four or more managed properties.

Of course, into the future the current and ongoing political and economic environment may influence the regulatory controls. But, in the meantime, it's important to take advice and deal with what's in front of you.

Remortgage now?

If you do have buy-to-let properties and feel that you want to take advantage of the current excellent deals on offer - where, in many instances, there has been a healthy reduction in rates and costs over the last 12 months* - now could be the time to act.

*(Source: *Mortgage Brain, August 2017)*

There is no guarantee that it will be possible to arrange continuous letting of the property, nor that the rental income will be sufficient to meet the costs of the mortgage.

The value of your Buy-to-Let property and income from it can go down as well as up. You may also require advice on the legal and tax issues.

The Financial Conduct Authority does not regulate legal and taxation advice, and most Buy-to-Let mortgages.

HM Revenue & Customs practice and the law relating to taxation are complex and subject to individual circumstances and changes which cannot be foreseen.
